CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 20.-Washington won her first game of the season from Cleveland this afternoon in a batting struggle, which was thoroughly en-joyed by a large Saturday crowd. The Senators played by far a better fielding game, and gave Patten superb support with the exception of one misplay, while the work of the Clevelands was loose, Scott started in to pitch for Cleveland, but only lasted one inning, and Dowling relieved him. The latter was hit freely throughout the contest, being touched for a total of twenty bases. Cleveland start-ed off as though they would put Patten out of the business, but it was not until toward the end of the contest that they were able to bunch hits on him.

Pickering and Waldron carried off the felding honors, both making sensational catches. The one made by Waldron was the fifth inning, when he ran in from right field to near second base to get LaChance's low fly. The work of Umpire Connelly, with the exception of one de-

Cleveland tied the score in her half. Pickering doubled to right field. Waldron and Quinn went for the half, and collided, Waldren being disabled for a few min-utes. Pickering was caught at third on McCarthy's attempted sacrifice. O'Brieand McCarthy went to third, coming in on Beck's out.

In the third, Waldron started off with a single. Farrell followed suit. Dungan attempted to sacrifice, and beat out his bunt, when Dowling failed to get the ball. filling the bases. Clarke forced Waldron at the plate, when Beck made a good stop and throw of his vicious grounder. Dowling forced in a run by giving Foster his Coughlin struck out, but Quinn

On O'Brien's out, Pickering scored. Beck singled, scoring McCarthy. La Chance struck out, but Bradley was given his base. The bases were full when Yeager was hit by a pitched ball. Washington took the lead in the fourth inning, when Waldron singled, and, aided by Shiebeck's error and Clarke's single, he scored. Two more were made in the sixth when Farrell tripled, coming home on Dungan's long fly. Clarke was hit by a pitched ball, and came home on Foster's

Cleveland made one in the seventh when McCarthy started off with a double, coming home on Beck's single. Waldron's double in the ninth and Dungan's dron's double in the ninth and Dungan's single scored one more run for the Senators. Coughlin's home run hit in the ninth inning ended the scoring for the Senators. With four runs to the good, the Senators felt confident, but Cleveland started on a Garrison finish. After Mc-Carthy fouled to Clarke, O'Brien singled and Beck tr' 1, scoring O'Brien. On La Chance's teck scored. In dodging from an inshoot the ball struck the handle of Bradley's bat and rolled fair and Clarke threw him out. The score:

TROUBLE FOR CONNELLY.

The Umpire Pelted With Bottles and

Cushions at Cleveland. CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 20.-By the timely interference of Manager McAleer and the other members of the Cleveland team this afternoon, Umpire Connelly was saved from bodily harm from an enraged crowd numbering nearly 3,000 people. It was in the ninth inning when the real trouble commenced. Cleveland needed four runs to tie the score, and two were scored when Bradley came to bat. In trying to dodge from an inshoot, the ball struck the handle of his bat and rolled fair. Bradley never stirred away from the plate, claiming that the ball touched him. Clarke threw to first, and Connelly called Bradley out. When Connelly said "out," the crowd on the uncovered bleachers made a dash for him, and Manager McAleer, with the Cleveland players, horried to his assistance. As he was nearing the gate been the grandstand and the covered pavilion, some one threw a soda pop bottle at the umpire, striking a boy on the leg, knocking him down. This was the commencement of hostilities. Pop bottles and cushions were thrown at Connesty's head, while the Cleveland players were protecting him in the absence of the police, none of whom was in sight. As Connelly passed through the gate the crowd surged after him and cushions and bottles were thrown from above the stand on the heads of these below. Several took a punch at Connelly from the rear, but did no damage. He finally reached the clubhouse, with hundreds after him. Three special policemen finally arrived and dispersed the crowd. Several people were injured by the bottles and cushions, and two or three were badly cut, as the blood on the grounds showed. The Potomac River in the vicinity of Georgetown was gay with many colored flags and buntings in honor of the annual regatta of the Potomac Boat Club, which took place last evening at the clubhouse at the foot of Thirty-first Street, beginat the foot of finity and sarret, begin-ning shortly before 7 o'clock, and lasting until after dark. Many aquatic events were witnessed by a large gathering of club members and friends, and some excellent sport was enjoyed by the enthusiastic crowd.

The races were run over the upper river course, the start being opposite the Three Sisters, about the Aqueduct Bridge, and the finish at the clubhouse. The Potomac was placid and as smooth as a millipond. A slight breeze blew, and conditions for water sport were excellent. Six events passed off in perfect time. Only one event, the single canoes, was scratched. The programme included single sculls, double sculls, four-oared shells, eight-oared shells, double canoes, and a relay swimming match across the river, The best event of the evening was the eight-oared race. The course was one mile, straight down the river, and the two crafts raced down the stream side by side almost the entire distance. SHARKEY'S STRENGTH COUNTS. Wrestling Match With Peter

Maher Declared a Draw. PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Thomas Sharkey and Peter Maher met in a wrestling match at the Athletic baseball grounds this afternoon before 600 people. The first bout was catch-as-catch-can, no old barred. Maher took the initiative and in the first minute apparently had the sailor in trouble. The latter, however, saved himself by bridging, and he wrig-gled out of harm's way just as Peter stopped to spit on his hands in order to get a fresh hold.

Peter, reversing his tactics, grabbed the bulky legs of Sharkey and endeavored to use his head for a rammer, but Thomas did not seem to mind that a little bit, and Maher finally gave up the task. Sharkey then spread himself flat, and Peter, with a commendable display of energy, made various attempts to secure all kinds of holds. Several times he had Sharkey in trouble, but on each occasion the latter saved himself by using his tremendous strength.

Maher was weakening himself by wn efforts to get the shoulders of the sallorman on the floor and when the lat-ter took a hand on the offensive he was practically all in. Sharkey won the fall with a half Nelson in seven minutes and ten seconds.

The second bout was at collar and elbow and was brief. It was evident from the start that collar and elbow was Maher's long suit, so far as the wrestling game is concerned, for he sent Sharkey galley west in the first thirty seconds, without, however, scoring a fall. Peter without, nowever, scoring a rain. Feer twice dropped Sharkey to the mat, and finally, after being at work for two minutes and twenty-five seconds, he succeeded in getting both shoulders and one hip of the sailor flat on the mat and was declared the winner. eclared the winner. The third, and what was to have been the deciding, bout was at the Graeco-Roman style. The two big fighters pulled and tugged away at each other for all they were worth. Once, after seven minutes of wrestling, Maher did secure a fall, but Referee Wolf was on the wrong side of the men and failed to see it. It was a welcome relief to both men when time was called. Under the conditions the bout was declared a draw,

One Story of the Origin of the Tight Chin Strap. An Englishman connected with the mule shipments from this port to South Africa told an odd story a few days ago which has a slightly horse marine flavor, but here it is. The topic of conversation was the little paneake hat which is the distinguishing chara teristic of the British sol-dier and which, plastered on the extreme posterior protuberance of his head, is held in place by a leathern band girding the face and hooked beneath what is universally known as "Tommy Atkins" Lip." From constant exercise of the inferior labial muscle a remarkable development has been produced, and in due course of time the prehensile quality of the British time the prehensile quality of the British lower lip may be expected to transform itself into something as generally useful as the trunk of the tapir. But that has nothing to do with the Englishman's story, which concerns only the origin of the lip-band. Like many another fashion, it was the result, it appears, of accident and vanity. Time was when the Britishers, in accord with common sense and the rest was the result, it appears, of accident and vanity. Time was when the Britishers, in accord with common sense and the rest of the carry indian campaigns when the Atkinses of the day were having high times skinning Begums, and no common soldier felt comfortable unless he was toting a Kohinoor around in his pocket. It was not always comfortable campaigning, however, and sometimes money was more plentiful inan food.

One day a command which had been ordered to march from Benares to one of those places which Kipling knows how to spell had its comissariat cut off and was forced to march three days with only food enough for one. By the time the route was half over all the spunk had gone out of the command, and on the last day demoralization was so complete that an attack would have been a very serious matter. The officer in charge was a person of resources, and, haiting his command, he ordered the men to take off their caps and shorten their chin straps six inches. When the soldiers put their hats on again the bands struck them across the lips. "Now, all who are hungry may chew and be blanked," was his next command. The Atkinses did as directed, and soon found that munching on the leather strap reduced their hunger to an astonishing degree, and the command marched to its destination, chewing and cheerful, and so proud of their adventure that they affected the short bridle, and the fashion quickly spread to the rest of the army. That officer must have had experience in athletics as it is well known amonk runners that to hold something irmly bewteen the teeth is a great assistance in case of violent and sustained effort, and mouthpieces with rubber bands made specially for the purpose, are sold by dealers in grotting goods.—New Orleans Times-Democrat. oy dealers in sporting eans Times-Democrat.
